Sustainability is a strategic direction for many industries currently. The chemical industry has several leading players taking on sustainable strategies to meet future competitive needs. One of the key strategies of the National Standardisation Programme is sustainability. This strategy is to help grow the key industries in Singapore and support both industry and government initiatives in sustainability.

The Chemical Standards Committee (CSC) intends to assess these needs for the chemical industry and this seminar is one of the channels being used for this purpose. Potential sustainability needs by both industry and government will be presented. Current key industry projects will be presented by the Chemical Standards Committee and its technical committees to raise industry awareness of the strategic importance of standards to business.
